I vaguely remember that all the cra's were doing under the original settlement was putting "included in someone else's bky" on the report. Or maybe it was just equifax. Before that, all the cra's were just taking it off the authorized user's report without even investigating. But under the settlement as it originally was (if I recall right) they could still smear the other's report with the b-word. Now they won't be doing that.
